Fact: Only 3% of American businesses survive long enough to celebrate their 60th anniversary

What Makes a Milestone?

By any standard, a 60th anniversary is considered a milestone. Sixty years in business means growing, adapting and changing with the economic climate. It means doing many things right, correcting the things that went wrong, and meeting challenges as they arise along the way. There is no business, no anniversary, no milestone, however, without the people who matter most: our customers and our Admiral Metals family. The loyalty of our customers and the efforts of our Admiral family have allowed us to grow from a local company serving the Boston area to a local company serving much of the country.

We're proud to celebrate 60 years in business. It serves as a reference point and validation for the values we bring to our business every day; to operate with honesty and integrity, and to take care of the people we value most. I am very grateful to you for taking the journey with us. Thank you for sharing the road to Sixty.

Best regards,

Jim B.

New No-Lead Brass Alloys

The search for a no lead alloy with optimal machinability has been a brass industry challenge. Compliance with AB1953 typically has meant sacrificing machinability. Admiral Metals has found a solution with Mueller Brass no lead alloy C27450. This product meets the current standards for plumbing brass while optimizing machinability. In addition, C27450 is completely recyclable and can be mixed with other recycled brass alloys without contamination. C27450 is excellent for any product required to comply with AB1953, such as any pipe, fitting, valve or fixture intended to convey or dispense water for human consumption. Available now at Admiral Metals in 0.250"-3.000" rounds and hexagons with the following fabrication properties:

Soldering - Excellent
Brazing - Excellent
Cold Working - Excellent
Plating - Excellent

On Monday, January 17, 2011, the Admiral Metals family lost Mac Burstein, the company's founder. A man of great vision, integrity, an undying entrepreneurial spirit, and an uncompromising work ethic, Mac led Admiral Metals for 60 years. He had a passion for working in partnership with and bringing value to his customers long before it became the current trend. It was simply the way in which he conducted himself in life and in business. Mac will be missed by the entire Admiral Metals family, its employees, vendors and customers.
